STATE NEWS.

The young men of Gray are forming a temperance society.

Horatio G. Hines was killed by accident at Bethel, April 30th, where he was getting out a few days.

Mr. S. L. Gibson of Waterville will immediately set about the work of repairing the old Block House in Winslow.

None of the floating vessels owned at East port, will be for the Banks this spring, but will go into the coasting business, owing to the low price of coals.

The body of Dr. Horace M. [illegible] murdered in Dorchester, Mass., was brought to Waldoboro for burial, Saturday. Mrs. Jane [illegible] Miller, the child's mother, is a daughter of John Achorn of that place.

The venerable Caleb Hodgkins, of Hodgdon's Mills, Boothbay, one of the first settlers of that place, and for whom the village was named, died April 24, at the age of [illegible] years.

The several saw mills in Gouldsboro manufactured from 50 to 60 cords of saw dust per day. As this could readily be disposed of at a low price as though it would bring it only 25 cts. there isn't much waste in cutting up logs at that place.

Samuel L. Allen, a prominent citizen of Bath, attempted suicide on Saturday. For several months he has been afflicted with a painful disease of the head, which has finally resulted in total mental aberrations.

Mr. Peter Williams, one of the oldest Scandinavian citizens of Portland, with his wife and child left by the steamer Scandinavian on Saturday for a visit to Denmark for an absence of thirty seven years.

A Sad Story.—Hon. Francis Hamilton was once a very wealthy and prominent lawyer of New Jersey, but became reduced to poverty. Being a friend called at his house in New Brighton, Staten Island, and found him dead in bed, with his wife sitting beside him holding his hand. His poor wife, once remarkable for her accomplishments, was out of her mind and unable to give any account of her husband's death. In full she told her children that he told her he was sure that he was dead, though he lived very well. For three hours they had been calling for the death hammer carefully to [illegible] to prepare for the [illegible] Dog some time past. Mr. Hamilton's death had been fasting and work at his business gradually left him until he died his family was reduced to extreme poverty. He was not a person to speak and in those who had known him in his palmy days and who would gladly have befriended him, and the widow of the room, with his deceased [illegible] showed but too plainly that his days had been [illegible] by wants. The last [illegible] medical attendance for a long time.

Butter is very punchy just now, but I think the worst is over. She paid 62 cents a pound for butter [illegible].

The girls of a Chelsea woman's family developed a peculiar [illegible] for using their one cent stamps, instead of the regular kind, upon their envelopes. The letters were so plain and matter-of-fact and the late epts at reading surveillance so [illegible] fashioned way grew scarce that one inquiring mother investigated the [illegible]. THE ARKANSAS IMBROGLIO.

The disgraceful strife for the Gubernatorial chair of Arkansas, which has been going on since the inauguration when Brooks forcibly ejected Baxter from the State House at Little Rock, has assumed proportions which even the contestants themselves could hardly have anticipated. We have previously recited at length the causes which led to the actual outbreak of hostilities, and our readers have been kept informed from day to day of the progress of events. The first bloodshed, which occurred on the 21st ultimo, was evidently accidental, and differed in nothing merely a skirmish or affray. It was participated in by those whom it has been impossible to discover, both claimants asserting that they had no connection with the affair, and that the people were the first to fire on the military. But the fight at Norristown has not been such an accidental affair, and there is no disposition on the part of the Governor's forces to fight their battles with the usual boundaries. Congress has authorized the President to use the military forces of the United States against domestic violence, and upon application of the Legislature or Executive when the Legislature cannot be convened. Since there is no evidence that he shall not act in accordance with legislative wishes, the Governor, by his own proclamation, has declared that the people were entitled to the military aid. The Democrats are fully awakened to the importance of the struggle, and are not only arming but with the true spirit of war, the weaker party is reinforced by the bold and hardy mountaineers from the hills and has assumed proportions which even the contestants themselves could hardly have anticipated. WASHINGTON, May [illegible]

SENATE.

Mr. [illegible] from the Committee [illegible] reported from the [illegible] of the Legislature [illegible] history of city posts on [illegible] law and [illegible] action of the city [illegible] was referred [illegible] committee.

Mr. [illegible] from the bill appropriating [illegible] the sufferers in Louisiana [illegible] and thereto [illegible] that the bill expire [illegible] though originally granted. The bill was passed without discussion.

Mr. Foster of Ohio, offered a resolution directing the Joint Committee on Affairs of the District of Columbia, to inquire whether any officers or employes of the United States or of the District Government have been employed in any conspiracy to defeat or hinder investigation, and particularly to enquire into the circumstances connected with the late robbery of the safe in the office of the United States District Attorney. Adopted.

On motion of Mr. E. R. Hoar of Mass., the bill defining the rights and duties of citizens abroad was recommitted to the Foreign Committee.

Mr. Poland of Vt., from the Judiciary Committee, reported a bill in relation to certain judicial officers in Utah. The bill having been read, Mr. Grennan of Neb., made a point of order that the bill involving payments from the Treasury should first be considered in Committee of the Whole. While the point of order was being discussed, Mr. Poland withdrew the bill.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Centennial bill appropriating $1,000,000.

Mr. Kelly of Penn., opposed the bill, denouncing the celebration as a matter in which the Government of the country was committed by both the Legislative and Executive Departments of the Government.

Mr. Kelley advocated the bill regarding the exhibition as a small appropriation compared with what France, England and Australia had supplied for their International exhibitions, but a fit unit for the purpose, and he predicted that the result would prove that Congress never made a more productive investment.

Mr. Hale of Maine opposed the bill. He quoted Senator Cameron's remarks pledging reward that the people of Pennsylvania could give three millions, if necessary, to make the exhibition creditable, not only to Pennsylvania, but to the whole United States, and declaring in response to a question why an act of Congress was needed that they only asked one to give the enterprise character.

Mr. Myers of Pa.—Did not the people of Philadelphia and Pennsylvania give their millions?

Mr. Hale—Does the gentleman mean to take one half of the promise and to violate the other half? The promise was not only that Pennsylvania would give her millions but that Congress would not be asked for anything and that all that was wanted was a charter. Pennsylvania acted character in redeeming every thing she pledged herself to do, while the true and perfidious character of the ways and means of Congress was shown in the failure to keep the pledges of Congress in regard to one of the pledges which involves character in the highest degree. Is there any faith to be given to human promises, given legislatively? Or is the action taken by the American Congress on the avowals of men distinguished for public service to be taken as nothing? Mr. Hale went on to show that the effort to interest the people in the celebration was dead and a blasted fame aside from the coterie of men interested in the exhibition, aside from the advertisements and puffs in newspapers, aside from what sentiment could be worked up in Philadelphia and vicinity. The whole thing had taken flat.

Mr. Kelley—While I admit very freely that the subscriptions have not been what I had hoped they would be, the papers show that there has been a subscription of 100,000 shares of stock by citizens of the different States.

Mr. Hale—How much of that is from Pennsylvania?

Mr. Kelley—To the patriotism of Pennsylvania be it said that a very large percentage of the subscriptions is from Pennsylvania. She and her people are determined if they can prevent the nation shall not be dishonored.

Mr. Hale warned the House that this appropriation would not be the last that would be asked. The bars would be let down by the passage of this bill, and Congress would be held responsible for all liability that would be contracted.

Mr. Packard of Pennsylvania and Mr. Freeman of New York spoke in favor of the bill, and the House took a recess.

The evening session was devoted to the consideration of the Indian Appropriation bill.

THE SUFFERING INCREASING — APPEAL FOR MORE AID.

WASHINGTON, May 5. The Mayor of New Orleans has sent the following telegram to Professor Loubay:—"You and other friends of Louisiana must do everything possible for our sufferers, acting according to your own discretion as to measures. The limit of suffering by the flood is widening." The gentleman addressed and ex Governors Herbert and Wells and other prominent citizens of the flooded region, will issue an address to the people of the United States, showing the extent of the calamity and the necessity for immediate renewed efforts for larger contributions to the relief of the suffering and to save human li

THE ARKANSAS IMBROGLIO.

SPECIAL TO THE MISSOURI JOURNAL.

LITTLE ROCK, May 4—Midnight. A squad of United States troops were out looking for the missing judges, as was also a squad under the command of the sheriff, they did not find them.

SKIRMISH.

A report from Jefferson states that a squad of Gen White's men encountered sixty of Brooks' men above Arkansas Post, yesterday evening, and dispersed them. One report says that five men were killed.

WARLIKE PREPARATIONS

Preparations on both sides look very warlike to-night, and all sorts of reports are afloat. One is to the effect that Brooks intends to assault Baxter, and another that Baxter intends to assault Brooks. The United States troops occupy their old positions between both parties.

THE DECISION OF THE LEGISLATURE.

J. P. Berry, who claims to have been elected Auditor on the same ticket, with Brooks, and who was prevented from prosecuting his claims in the courts by prohibition against the Circuit Court, issued by the Supreme Court, publishes a letter favoring the submission of the whole matter to the Legislature. The Gazette and other conservative journals favor a call by the Legislature of a Constitutional Convention with a view to submitting the whole matter to the people.

Both Brooks and Baxter received a few recruits to-day.

THE CAPTURE OF THE JUDGES.

NEW YORK, May 5. A Little Rock special states that the Supreme Court did not meet yesterday consequent upon the capture of Judges Bennett and Searle. Judge Stephenson, who was in the train when the others were captured, states that when the train stopped at Arkansas, oppos te Little Rock, Captain Williams, with several armed men, stopped exit from the cars, and went to Judges Bennett and Searle, telling them they were under arrest. After some remonstrance they were from them. The men seized Judge Stephenson, but left him in the car, saying their orders were to take only two. On nearing the train they were taken across the river in a skiff to St. John's College, where they were kept during the night. In the morning they were put on horses and in charge of cavalry taken into the country.

THE JUDGES' WHEREABOUTS.

The reporters visited St. John's college Monday morning, but the Judges were not there. An unfinished letter of Judge Bennett's was found there. It is said the judges, with their escorts, have gone to Pine Bluff. King White is reported still at Pine Bluff. Some of his men captured the town of Devitt, Arkansas county, pillaged it and released the prisoners in jail. A fight there is reported.

Judge Bennett's son has received a note saying that he and Judge Searle are well treated, and are in no bodily fear, but don't know when they will be released.

CAPTURE AND RELEASE OF THE STATE AUDITOR.

On Monday morning at 1 o'clock State Auditor Wheeler was awakened. He went to his door, where he was seized by Governor McConary and men, taken in a carriage to Governor Baxter, who immediately released him. McConary said to Baxter that he would capture State Treasurer Page and Brooks, if the Governor would give orders.

EXCHANGE OF COMPLIMENTS.

The sentinel of the government troops was fired on twice last night, and returned the fire.

MARTIAL LAW.

Gov Baxter's forces have a guard across Markham street, and a company of regulars have been placed on the street facing them. The guards allow no one to pass their lines, which practically precludes entrance to the telegraph office.

CALLS OF THE KIDNAPPERS.

ST LOUIS, May 5. A special from Little Rock says the arrest of Judges Bennett and Searle was to keep them out of the way so that the question as to who is Governor shall not be decided by the Supreme Court, before whom a question was to be brought relative to the legality of a warrant drawn upon the State Treasurer by Brooks for funds, the Treasurer denying Brooks authority. Baxter denies authorizing the arrest of the judges, but an published report of the arrest directed to Baxter was found in St. John's college. Writs of habeas corpus have been issued for the judges, and Baxter and his generals are reported to have left town to avoid the service of the writs.

NO DECISION ANNOUNCED.

WASHINGTON, May 5. At the Cabinet session to day there was some conversation over the condition of affairs in Arkansas, but the Executive has not yet delivered its decision on the disputed case. The Attorney-General stated that the attorneys for Brooks have not completed their arguments, and have asked for a day or two longer in order to argue it thoroughly, and probably the much hoped for decision of the President will be announced by Friday next, if not before.

MASSACHUSETTS.

EXTENSIVE FIRE IN HYDE PARK.

BOSTON, May 5. Neponset Hall Block at Hyde Park was totally burned this morning, including the postoffice, bank, Unitarian society's hall, Norfolk County Journal office, Noble's apothecary shop, Sanford and Runnells' grocery, E. W. Pratt's periodical store, D. M. Lucke's shoe store, and Lutz's jewelery store. Loss $45,000; insured $35,000.

FIRE IN NATICK.

A two-story dwelling house in Natick valued at $4,000 owned and occupied by Fisher Sawyer, was burned last night.

WASHINGTON.

THE APPROPRIATIONS.

WASHINGTON, May 5. The House Committee on Appropriations to-day continued the consideration of the sundry civil bill. They agreed to largely reduce the lighthouse appropriation, and fixes the fee of pension agents for administering oaths at 20 cents instead of 25.

FAIR PLAY ASKED.

Four or five hundred laborers assembled to have a conference with Mr. Chipman, delegate of the District of Columbia, relative to money owing them by several contractors under the Board of Public Works. They want Congress to pass a bill making an appropriation to pay them and withhold the amount from sums due the authorities by the Government.

INTEREST IN THE CENTENNIAL.

The long duration of the centennial appropriation bill to-day attracted to the House large numbers of Philadelphians. Among them were several commissioners and others directly concerned in the arrangements for the exposition. They express themselves satisfied that the House will appropriate $3,000,000, but are not so certain as to the Senate.

THE WAYS AND MEANS INVESTIGATION.

Mr. Sumner testified before the Ways and Means Committee to-day that he was private secretary for Seaborn, in the privacy was all kept by Seaborn. At Seaborn's offices in New York DeKay and Mr. Fay had desks

LONDON, May 5. SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

APRIL CIVIL TERM.

CHIEF JUSTICE APPLETON Presiding.
EZRA C. BRETT, Esq., Clerk.

Tuesday, May 5. Melvin Preble vs. The City of Bangor; action upon an account for services rendered in attendance upon persons sick with small-pox in the winter of 1872-3, amounting to $1,961.

The plaintiff was elected City Physician in March, 1872. The defendant claimed that it was a part of plaintiff's official duty to render such service by virtue of an ordinance of the city, which reads as follows:—

Sec. 1. There shall annually be elected on the fourth Monday of March, a City Physician, whose duty it shall be to attend, under the direction of the Overseer of the Poor, upon all paupers of the city, when in need of medical aid, including all inmates of the Almshouse, Work House and House of Correction.

Sec. 2. In cases of small-pox or other infectious disease, the City Physician, shall receive such compensation, in addition to his annual salary, as the City Council may deem just and proper.

The City Council had voted plaintiff $800, in addition to his annual salary of $250, for the service sued for, and the defendants contended that he had no standing in Court, being bound to take that sum, or nothing.

Plaintiff refused that sum, and claimed that the services sued for were no part of his official duty as City Physician, first, because he attended all of his small-pox patients under the direction of the municipal officers (Mayor and Board of Aldermen) and not under the direction of the Overseers of the Poor. Second, that his patients were not paupers, but persons whom the municipal officers had taken charge of under chapter 14 of the Revised Statutes, relating to contagious diseases, sections 1, 29 and 30; that the "cases of small pox or other infectious diseases" referred to in section 18 of the city ordinance above cited, referred only to such cases as break out in the Alms House, Work House, or House of Correction, or among the paupers of the city, in charge of the Overseers of the Poor, and not to such cases as may break out anywhere within the limits of the city, over which the statutes give to the municipal officers such extraordinary powers.

The Court ruled that the services sued for were no part of the plaintiff's duty under said ordinance as City Physician, and the case was submitted to the jury upon the single issue of "What were plaintiff's services sued for worth?"

Plaintiff introduced several physicians of Bangor and other parts of the State to show what is the rule for charges for medical services rendered in small-pox cases compared with other diseases. All testified that the rate is from twice to three times greater, and that the price of day visits in Bangor is $2 00 and night visits $3 00.

Plaintiff in his bill sued, charged $3 00 per visit to a house containing from one to four patients; $4 00 if more than four; for a single visit to the hospital whether one or six hundred patients, $5 00.

The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff for $1,701.

The case goes to the Law Court on exceptions to the ruling the Court.

Vose and Barker for plff.

Wakefield, City Solicitor, W. C. Crosby.

Francis H. Smith vs. Lot Dole; action upon the case to recover damages caused by the defendant's negligently and negligently setting a fire on his own land in Brewer, in August, 1873, whereby the plaintiff's land was burned over, and injured to the amount of $150 or more.

The defendant admitted setting the fire on his own land to clear it for tillage, and contended that he set the fire at a proper time, and in a prudent manner and managed it carefully also denied plaintiff's title to the land burned over. Verdict for plaintiff for $150.

L. Barker. J. Hutchings.

ON TRIAL.

Inhabitants of Holden vs. Inhabitants of Glenburn; action for supplies furnished to a pauper and his family, giving the name of each.

Plaintiffs proved notice to defendants and read the reply which counsel for plaintiffs contended implied a full admission of the settlement of the paupers in defendant town, and that defendants were thereby estopped to deny the settlement of the paupers in their town.

The Court ruled pro forma that the position taken by the plaintiffs, as to estoppel be sustained, and thereupon defendants submitted to a default and the case goes to the full Court on this question.

Report of Committ

...to the Weekly & Courier ...

...CHAPTER II.

Before noon the next day it was generally believed throughout Four Forks that Ridgeway Dent had been attacked and wounded at Cavendish Ridge by a highwayman, who fled on the approach of the Wingdam coach. It is to be presumed that this statement met with Ridgeway's approval, as he did not contradict it, nor supplement it with any details. His wound was severe, but not dangerous.—After the first excitement had subsided, sharp men, I think, a prevailing impression, common to the provincial mind, that his misfortune was the result of the defective shortquality of his being a stranger," said in a vague sort of a way a warning to others and a lesson to him.

"Did you hear how that San Francisco fellow was took down the other night," was the average tone of introductory remark. Indeed, there was a general suggestion that Ridgeway's presence was due that no self respecting, highminded highwayman, honorably conversative of the best interests of Tuolumne County, could for a moment to create.

Except for the few words spoken on that peaceful morning, Ridgeway was reticent of the past. When Jennie strove to gather some details of the affray that might offer a clew to his unknown assailant, a subtle twinkle in his brown eyes was the only response. When Mr. McClosky adventured the same process the young gentleman threw abusive epithets, and eventually slippers, teaspoons and other lighter articles within the reach of an invalid, at the head of his questioner. I think, sir," said Mr. McClosky, he had for me this morning with a candlestick."

It was about this time that Miss Jenny, having sworn her father to secrecy regarding the manner in which Ridgeway had been carried into the house, ventured on the task of addressing the young man as "Mr Dent," and of apologizing for intruding whenever she entered the room in the discharge of her household duties. It was about this time that she began to spend eighty minutes, instead of ten, to those duties, and less general in her attentions, it was at this time that the quality of the invalid's diet improved, and that she consulted him less frequently about it. It was about this time that she began to see more shopping, in at the hours was usually frequented by her former, with whom she rode, walked and danced. It was at about this time, also, and when Ridgeway was able to be brought out on the verandah in a chair, that, with great artfulness of manner, she introduced to him Miss Lucy Arle, the sister of her betrothed—a flashing brunette and terrible heart-breaker of Four Forks. And in the midst of this gayety she opened that she would spend a week with the Robinsons —to whom she owed a visit. This project bored greatly Ridgeway, so much indeed that she became quite haggard over the business, she explained to her father, at a tête-à-tête indulgence in family. "For see, father, I won't have many chances after Joan and I are married—you know what I mean—and I need make the most of my time." and she laughed an odd little laugh, which had lately become habitual to her. "And how's Mr Dent getting on?" Her talk generally that he was getting on well, considered, was well for a man who had been so dangerously ill. It was also the best than a fact and Jenny, with the exception of women who will always say an untruth, because it is the easiest thing to do, knew better than to believe the assertions of a medical attendant. But several days before the week's visit to the Robinsons was to end, Ridgeway, with a considerable degree of hesitation, informed Jenny, in her father's presence, that he would not leave Four Forks for some time, as he had decided to remain there and practice his profession. Jenny received the announcement with a smile, and a remark that she was glad to hear it, and Mr McClosky, with a grunt of satisfaction, left the room to look after his horses. Then Ridgeway, with a nervous laugh, said that he had not yet informed Mr McClosky of his intention, and that he would be glad if Jenny would break the news to him. Jenny, in a manner unusually cold, replied that she would not, and that Mr Dent must do his own dirty work. Then, with a sudden change of manner, she threw herself on her knees by his side, and, looking up into his face, said, with a pretty pout, that she was very angry with him, and that he was a naughty boy—but she must know what it was all about.

Ridgeway slowly opened his heavy blue eyes, and gazed upon her. Presently a glad smile overspread his handsome face, a smile more eloquent than words, and he whispered softly

"It—was—your—kiss—did—it—Jenny dear! I had tried to—how high priced—the actress was in—Never mind, Jenny!" he feebly paused in her hand to his lips—"it—is worth it," and fainted away.

Jenny started to her feet and looked wildly around her. Then, with a sudden resolution, she stooped over the insensible man, and, with one strong effort, lifted him in her arms as if he had been a child. When her father, a moment later, rubbed his eyes and awoke from his sleep upon the verandah, it was to see a ghastliness sweet and triumphant, striding toward the house with the helpless body of a man lying across that breast where man had never lain before—a goddess at whose imperious mandate he when she had lain her unconscious burden on the sofa, the goddess fled, and a woman, helpless and trembling, stood before him. A woman that cried out that she had "killed him"—that she was "unkind, wicked!" and that even saying so, staggered and fell beside her late burden. And all that Mr McClosky could do was to feebly rub his beard, and say to himself vaguely and incoherently, that "Jinny had fetched him."

CHAPTER 12.

Before noon the next day it was generally believed throughout Four Forks that Ridgeway Dent had been attacked and wounded at Cavendish Ridge by a highwayman, who fled on the approach of the Wingdam coach. It is to be presumed that this statement met with Ridgeway's approval, as he did not contradict it, nor supplement it with any details. His wound was severe, but not dangerous.—After the first excitement had subsided, sharp men, I think, a prevailing impression, common to the provincial mind, that his misfortune was the result of the defective shortquality of his being a stranger," said in a vague sort of a way a warning to others and a lesson to him. "Did you hear how that San Francisco feller was took down the other night," was the average tone of introductory remark. Indeed, there was a general suggestion that Ridgeway's presence was due that no self respecting, highminded highwayman, honorably conversative of the best interests of Tuolumne County, could for a moment to create.

Except for the few words spoken on that peaceful morning, Ridgeway was reticent of the past. When Jennie strove to gather some details of the affray that might offer a clew to his unknown assailant, a subtle twinkle in his brown eyes was the only response. When Mr. McClosky adventured the same process the young gentleman threw abusive epithets, and eventually slippers, teaspoons and other lighter articles within the reach of an invalid, at the head of his questioner. "I think, sir," said Mr. McClosky, he had for me this morning with a candlestick."

It was about this time that Miss Jenny, having sworn her father to secrecy regarding the manner in which Ridgeway had been carried into the house, ventured on the task of addressing the young man as "Mr Dent," and of apologizing for intruding whenever she entered the room in the discharge of her household duties. It was about this time that she began to spend eighty minutes, instead of ten, to those duties, and less general in her attentions, it was at this time that the quality of the invalid's diet improved, and that she consulted him less frequently about it. It was about this time that she began to see more shopping, in at the hours was usually frequented by her former, with whom she rode, walked and danced. It was at about this time, also, and when Ridgeway was able to be brought out on the verandah in a chair, that, with great artfulness of manner, she introduced to him Miss Lucy Arle, the sister of her betrothed—a flashing brunette and terrible heart-breaker of Four Forks. And in the midst of this gayety she opened that she would spend a week with the Robinsons —to whom she owed a visit. This project bored greatly Ridgeway, so much indeed that she became quite haggard over the business, she explained to her father, at a tête-à-tête indulgence in family. "For see, father, I won't have many chances after Joan and I are married—you know what I mean—and I need make the most of my time." and she laughed an odd little laugh, which had lately become habitual to her. "And how's Mr Dent getting on?" Her talk generally that he was getting on well, considered, was well for a man who had been so dangerously ill. It was also the best than a fact and Jenny, with the exception of women who will always say an untruth, because it is the easiest thing to do, knew better than to believe the assertions of a medical attendant. But several days before the week's visit to the Robinsons was to end, Ridgeway, with a considerable degree of hesitation, informed Jenny, in her father's presence, that he would not leave Four Forks for some time, as he had decided to remain there and practice his profession. Jenny received the announcement with a smile, and a remark that she was glad to hear it, nor Mr McClosky, with a grunt of satisfaction, left the room to look after his horses. Then Ridgeway, with a nervous laugh, said that he had not yet informed Mr McClosky of his intention, and that he would be glad if Jenny would break the news to him. Jenny, in a manner unusually cold, replied that she would not, and that Mr Dent must do his own dirty work. Then, with a sudden change of manner, she threw herself on her knees by his side, and, looking up into his face, said, with a pretty pout, that she was very angry with him, and that he was a naughty boy—but she must know what it was all about.

Ridgeway slowly opened his heavy blue eyes, and gazed upon her. Presently a glad smile overspread his handsome face, a smile more eloquent than words, and he whispered softly

"It—was—your—kiss—did—it—Jenny dear! I had tried to—how high priced—the actress was in—Never mind, Jenny!" he feebly paused in her hand to his lips—"it—is worth it," and fainted away.

Jenny started to her feet and looked wildly around her. Then, with a sudden resolution, she stooped over the insensible man, and, with one strong effort, lifted him in her arms as if he had been a child. When her father, a moment later, rubbed his eyes and awoke from his sleep upon the verandah, it was to see a ghastliness sweet and triumphant, striding toward the house with the helpless body of a man lying across that breast where man had never lain before—a goddess at whose imperious mandate he when she had lain her unconscious burden on the sofa, the goddess fled, and a woman, helpless and trembling, stood before him.
